Coronavirus deaths in China spike, Japan has first fatality

Total deaths in China are 1,367.

The rise, following a forecast earlier this week by China's senior medical adviser that the epidemic may end there by April, halted a global stocks rally.

But it appeared in large part to be due to methodology. Hubei had previously only allowed infections to be confirmed by RNA tests, which can take days. RNA, or ribonucleic acid, carries genetic information allowing identification of viruses.

But it has also begun using computerised tomography (CT) scans, which give images of the lungs, the Hubei health commission said, to identify cases and isolate them faster. As a result, another 14,840 new cases were reported in the province on Thursday, from 2,015 new cases nationwide a day earlier. But excluding cases confirmed using the new methods, the number of new cases rose by only 1,508.

"It is our current understanding that the new case definition widens the net, and includes not only lab-confirmed cases but also clinically diagnosed cases based on symptoms and exposure," World Health Organization (WHO) spokesman Tarik Jasarevic told Reuters. The new method is only being used in Hubei.

Tens of thousands infected

About 60,000 people have been infected in total, the vast majority of them in China.

Consultancy Capital Economics said the surge in deaths did not necessarily point to an acceleration in the spread of the outbreak but rather to a previous understatement of its spread.

"For now, the latest figures don't appear to undermine the recent tentative signs that the spread of the virus may be slowing," it said. The outbreak, believed to have emerged from a market in Wuhan where wildlife was traded illegally, has brought a backlash against local leaders.

Provincial Communist Party boss Jiang Chaoliang was sacked as secretary of the Hubei Provincial Committee, and Ma Guoqiang removed as party chief in Wuhan city, state media said. They were the two highest-profile officials to be axed since the outbreak began.

The new provincial chief, former Shanghai mayor Ying Yong, told state media the situation in Hubei remained very severe, but pledged to contain the outbreak. Chinese scientists are testing two antiviral drugs and preliminary clinical trial results are weeks away, though WHO chiefs have cautioned a vaccine could take 18 months to develop.

Global spread

Hundreds of infections have been reported in more than two dozen other countries and territories.

Tiny Singapore, an Asian travel hub, also reported its biggest daily jump in the number of confirmed cases, eight newly infected patients bringing its total to 58.

The biggest cluster outside China is on a cruise ship quarantined off the Japanese port of Yokohama, where a further 44 cases were reported on Thursday, taking the total to 219, though authorities said some elderly people would finally be allowed to disembark on Friday.
